Limitations of Reggie Data

- Includes clients at a limited number of agencies (but no participation bias)
- Does not document use of services at non-Reggie agencies
- Some information collected only by case management and/or medical providers
- Some information missing for a high proportion of clients

Conclusions

- 1998 Reggie clients (8 agencies) are similar to 1998 URS clients (13 agencies representing 75-80% of SF EMA CARE clients) in age, gender, income level, homelessness, injection drug use, health insurance, and primary source of health care.
- At least 35% of clients went without needed services in the past 6 months.
- Homeless and transgendered clients appear to have higher unmet need than other clients.
